LINDBERGH SOARS OVER RIVER HERE NEW YORK BOUND; WHISTLES SCREECH AS PLANES DRONE AT HIGH ALTITUDE

Bristol did its part in greeting Col. Charles A. Lindbergh this morning at 11.15 when the distinguished aviator accompanied by 29 planes flew over the Delaware River enroute to New York.

Whistles blew and bells clanged out a greeting as the planes droned overhead. Pedestrians craned their necks and gazed into the air and residents ran into the streets peering into the sky. "There he is," was the exclamation heard on every hand.

School children were dismissed so that they might get a fleeting glance at "Lindy."

The planes flew in regular formation in nine groups with three spread out following in the rear.

Early reports today said that Lindbergh would use his favorite, "The Spirit of St. Louis," but a last minute change in his plans made him decide upon an army pursuit plane instead of his own trans-Atlantic bus.

The keen ear of the youthful flyer detected a faulty note in the motor of the "St. Louis" as she turned up on the Anacostia field, this morning, and upon advice of his brother flyers at the field he accepted the army substitute. The engine fault was said by mechanics to be due to "sweat" collected in one cylinder.

"Lindy" was in an orange and black plane with the numerals "34" on each side and under the wing surface the name "U. S. Army."

NEW YORK, June 13.—New York awoke with color, and bursting with enthusiasm roared a welcome today to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who three weeks and three days ago blazed a glorious air trail from New York to Paris.

"Lindy."

That was the one word on every tongue.

The reception exceeded even the famous return of the 27th Division from the World War and George Dewey's reception in 1899.

Lindbergh glided down into the glistening waters of the harbor at 12.30 in an amphibian plane. He was transferred to the city official boat "Macon" which proceeded through a lane of hundreds of craft to Pier 4 at Battery.

Here he was preceded by 10,000 troops to the City Hall for the official greeting and where his mother was waiting to receive him.

MITCHELL FIELD, Mincola, N. Y.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh arrived here at 11.53 this morning enroute from Washington to the harbor off quarantine, where official reception by New York City will be given.

The flight from Washington to Mitchell Field required two hours and four minutes. He hopped off again for the Narrows in an amphibian plane at 12.02 p. m. With him in the plane was Captain Ira C. Eaker.

WASHINGTON, June 13 (I.N.S.).—With a wave of his hand and a cheery grin, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh sent a speedy army pursuit plane into the air at Bolling Field at 8.54 o'clock this morning—bound for New York and another tremendous homecoming celebration.

A last minute bit of hard luck forced the youthful flyer to abandon his trans-Atlantic plane, "The Spirit of St. Louis" on the field, and take an army plane for the two-hour journey.

The "St. Louis" didn't tune up right when mechanics started the motor. The trouble was a faulty cylinder, a "sweaty cylinder" they call it in the air service, and upon the advice of brother flyers at the field, Lindbergh reluctantly decided to accept a substitute plane.

Two score planes accompanied him into the air, the staccato roaring of their motors drowning out the cheers of several thousand watchers, who despite elaborate military and police precautions had gathered at the field to see the getaway.

The first group of single-seaters preceded "Lindy" into the air, and the first observation group, composed of two-seaters, followed him.

Lindbergh bade Washington goodbye with a flourish and gave experienced aviators at the field a final thrill by his daring take-off. As his landing wheels left the ground at the end of the run, he "pulled the stick into his stomach," as they say slangily in the air service and "pulled the stick up into the sky. But the little Curtiss motorer, as it were, balked.

He barked over, faced into the field twice while the two-seaters were getting on the ground in groups of three.

He shoved off in the teeth of a strong northeast wind, which had the flags about the field whipping stiffly in the early morning sunlight. The strength of the breeze may slow up his flying time to New York, although he was confident he would make it in two hours anyway. The distance is approximately 230 miles.

The field was muddy from last night's heavy rains, but the take-off was accomplished without mishap.

either to "Lindy" or the escorting planes. The trim little Curtiss taxied out, headed into the wind, and began to travel. Like a pert bird she started skimming head-on into the wind, gathering speed as the motor raced. The tail went up as she straightened to her work, and then he pulled the stick backward and soared aloft in a terrific burst of speed.

"Wow," said a pair of army pilots who witnessed his breath-taking get away. He circled the field until his escorting planes were all up and going. Then he turned the nose of the little racer northeast by the compass, and roared away. In five minutes he was but a speck in the sun-shot haze of the early morning, and in ten minutes he was out of sight.

Commander Richard E. Byrd, the North Pole flyer, took off from the field in an amphibian naval plane soon after "Lindy" soared away. After the departure, it developed that several days' work probably will be required before the "Spirit of St. Louis" is again ready to fly. The engineering officer of the field reported that a cam follower (CQ) was cracked, swollen and stuck. While it will not be necessary to tear down the engine to make the repairs, one cylinder will have to be removed entirely, it was said.

WASHINGTON, June 13 (I.N.S.).—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh was entered today into the ranks of the immortals of aviation and science. It was the final honor conferred upon him before he left for New York to receive the acclaim of the great metropolis for his epochal flight to Paris.

The greatest figures in modern-day aviation attended a breakfast in the flyer's honor early this morning, and saw conferred upon him a life membership in the National Aeronautical Association, which has been conferred upon but nine other men in history; and the Hubbard Medal by the National Geographic Society, which is reserved for the trail-blazers in history and science.

The breakfast was held at the Mayflower Hotel before the capital, which has so signally honored the youthful flyer, was awake.

President Porter H. Adams, of the National Aeronautical Association, told "Lindy" that he well deserved to take his place beside the nine other holders of life membership in the organization. They are Wilbur, Orville and Miss Katherine Wright, Samuel Pierpont Langley, Octave Chanute, John J. Montgomery, Charles M. Manley, Glenn Hammond Curtiss and Thomas A. Edison.

RIO JANEIRO, June 13.—Fishermen arriving here today reported sighting what they believed to be an aeroplane off the Marca Island. BRIDESBURG DEFEATS BRISTOL NINE; 8 TO 7

Ex-Phila. Catcher Does The Receiving For Visiting Team

GAME WAS INTERESTING

Bridesburg invaded Bristol yesterday and defeated the local nine by the score of 8 to 7.

The "burg" team certainly was well loaded for this occasion, having "Billy" Fish, the ex-Phila. catcher, and "Lou" Gerst, of Chambersburg (Blue Ridge League) team. "Ernie" Voltz was on the hill for Bridesburg and, like Hulmes, was hit hard.

The leading swatters for Bristol were "Eddie" Roe and Hulmes; for the "burg" team, Mros, with four hits, and Fish, with three hits. "Mike" Riola hit a home-run in the ninth inning. Riola's great catch in left field, and McDewitt's and Roe's fielding were features. "Dan" Dietrick caught his usual steady game. Bristol had "Big Jim" Heimbacker at first base, and he played a good game.

Next Sunday the Frankford Yellow Jackets will be here. This team needs no introduction to the fans as they carry a pretty slick bunch.

CARNIVAL WILL SPEND MUCH MONEY HERE

Statement To Be Compiled By The Management Of Shows

TO OPEN THIS EVENING

Despite charges so often made by opposition interests, traveling shows do not "take all the money out of town," Mr. Terneson, chairman of Goodwill Fire Company's spring frolic committee, said today, and instead the visit of one of the big amusement companies, which stays a week in a city, is more often an asset to the business life of the community, he declared.

The Nat. Reiss Shows, one of the largest exposition companies in America, and now in its 29th consecutive year, has been engaged by the firemen for their festival, Mr. Terneson said, and this organization has perfected a plan by which it is shown what money is actually spent in each city by the company and the 400 people in its employ. Each day every member of the company files with the office a daily purchasing statement showing what that member has spent for food, amusements, clothing, hotels, laundries and cleaners, and among other business men of the city. At the end of the week these statements are compiled into one general statement which is filed, with the individual blanks, with the Chamber of Commerce in each city.

From information gathered last year, and thus far this year, the Nat. Reiss Shows spends in each city between $6,000 and $10,000. It is the contention of Harry G. Melville, owner of The Nat. Reiss Shows, that every penny spent at the Spring Festival next week by Bristol citizens will be put right back into circulation among Bristol business men. The profit that the show has every right to expect, will come from citizens of other towns drawn to the festival by the advertising of The Nat. Reiss Shows, which will cover a forty mile radius from this borough.

The festival will open this evening and will continue all this week.

Film Shows Nine of Ten Fires Are Preventable

Nine out of every ten fires might have been prevented! It is this appalling fact that prompted the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios to produce "The Fire Brigade," the spectacular human interest story of the fire fighters, that is to be seen beginning tonight at the Riverside Theatre for a three day run.

The picture, however, is not merely a preachment, but one of the most entertaining and thrilling pictures ever produced, though any audience viewing it cannot help but be impressed by the needless loss of life and money through flames, according to Hunt Stromberg, the producer.

According to the National Fire Protective Association, the average annual property loss in the United States is more than a thousand dollars a minute, and in 1924 reached the amazing total of $548,000,000, eleven times greater than the average annual loss of all Europe. The greater evil, however, is the fact that every year 32,000 human casualties are suffered through fire, of which number 15,000 prove fatal in the most painful manner.

It is the belief of the International Order of Fire Engineers that a motion picture, such as "The Fire Brigade" will do more toward alleviating this great loss through fire than any other one thing, and it was with this in mind that the studio was approached by this order in the matter of producing the picture.

FIND MAN'S BODY ALONG R. R. TRACKS AT SOUTH BRISTOL

Papers in Clothing Indicate He Is James Devine, of Philadelphia

ABOUT 40 YEARS OLD

Belief Is That He Fell From Freight Train Onto Tracks

The body of a man thought to be James Devine, Philadelphia, was found on the P. R. R. tracks, South Bristol, early today. Papers in the clothing indicated the man's name was James Devine, 242 South 9th street, Philadelphia.

Deputy Coroner W. Furman Young was summoned and had the body removed to the morgue of the H. S. Rue Estate. Sergeant of P. R. R. police, Thomas Tanner, was notified and began an investigation.

The papers on the man's clothing showed that on May 11th, he had been employed as a laborer for the P. R. R. and had been assigned to a labor camp at Plainsboro. He was about 40 years of age and fairly well dressed. It is the opinion of Deputy Coroner Young that the man was riding a freight train and fell off and was killed at the point where his body was found. The body was found lying in a ditch just east of the water troughs at South Bristol. The body was in a ditch which drains the water from the tracks down the side of the elevated embankment. The body was lodged in such a position that the flow of water down the ditch was blocked and it had started to back up into the troughs. The man was lying on his face between tracks No. 1 and 2. He was bruised about the head.

He was a veteran of the late World's War.

FIREWORKS BRING DEATH TO GIRL, 5

Brother Suffers Severe Burns Trying to Extinguish The Flames

CHILDREN SEE TRAGEDY

A premature Fourth of July celebration by a group of small children in a Morrisville barn yesterday afternoon resulted in fatal burns to 5-year-old Helen Slizko, of Swamp Road, Morrisville, and serious burns to her brother, George, 10 years old.

The small girl sustained second and third degree burns of the entire body when a match ignited her clothing. She died at 9.30 o'clock last night, several hours after she was admitted to Mercer Hospital, Trenton, where, despite the measures of relief offered, her condition steadily grew worse.

Her brother, was painfully burned about the right arm when he attempted to extinguish the flames that completely enveloped his sister, while a group of playmates held back terrified.

The child's clothing was burned to ashes. According to Dr. James M. Kleink, of Morrisville, who was summoned and rushed the child to the hospital, she was burned from head to foot.

Quick response of Michael Smith, of Swamp and Ferry Roads, who heard the cries of the sister and brother, is believed to have saved the girl from instant death. Rushing into the barn, located in the rear of the Slizko home, he aided in extinguishing the flames that had both victims rolling about in agony and then summoned Dr. Kleink. In the meantime Mrs. Anna Yokin, an aunt of the two children, ran into the barn from the Slizko house, and assisted Dr. Kleink in removing the girl to the hospital. The boy was treated at his home for the burns by the summoned physician.

According to neighbors the two Slizko children and several of their chums had gone into the barn about 5 o'clock with the fire crackers and it was in the initial stages of the celebration that the match with which the girl intended to set off a fire-cracker ignited her clothing. Frightened as the flames completely swept her garments, all stood back but her brother, who rushed forward to render assistance and started to tear off her clothing with his hands. Her cries, however, were soon supplemented by those of her brother, whose arm was so severely burned that he was compelled to abandon his efforts to save his sister.

The children received as a favor a basket filled with candies, attached to his was a parasol and all the children wore paper hats at the table.

B. G. was the recipient of many pretty and useful gifts and was wished many more happy birthdays on the departure of her little friends.

THE BOY SCOUTS

What the Boy Scouts now mean to the United States and what they may be able to accomplish in the future are indicated by a recent report on the activities of this interesting organization.

The scouts have grown from nothing in 1910 to their present membership of more than 840,000, enrolled in a movement that makes for manhood and disinterested service. Growth of the movement has necessitated the creation of an elaborate national organization for its proper guidance and direction.

What the scouts have before them, in service to themselves in the development of character and to their communities in relief work, is shown by their past activities and deeds. Their co-operation in recent disasters, notably in the Florida hurricane and Mississippi flood areas, in life-saving, in conservation and reforestation, and in the protection of wild life, has been invaluable.

These good deeds and great works are not to be discounted; but more important than all else is the spirit of helpfulness and service inculcated in the boys.

The men who organized the Boy Scout movement and its thousands of troops and are working among the 840,000 scouts are to be commended for their service to Young America, but one likes to think of the Boy Scouts as an organization of boys working among themselves. Most of the credit must be given to the boys who are making themselves good boys and good future citizens.

PREVARICATORS

The Biological Survey, which spends much of its time in the pursuit of knowledge about such enthralling things as bears and mountain lions, chameleons, pack rats and mouse-traps, usually tells about them with accuracy tinged with humor. It is one of the few governmental branches at all given to romance.

As a rule even the Biological Survey has confined itself to a discussion of facts, without either enlarging or denying fancies. Not only has it never tilted at windmills, but it has not even crusaded against the host of nature-fakers who delight a credulous public.

At last, however, it is blasting mythology. Hoop-snakes do not roll, it says, nor do snakes sting with their tails. But—and this is the greatest heresy of all—stout leather boots and leggings are more effective against snake-bite than horsehair lariats, snake guards or other charms. They are better, even, than poison gas. This is comforting news to those followers of Izaak Walton who have had as much difficulty in obtaining a flask of phosgene for the one hip pocket as in filling the other flask for the other hip.

But hasn't the Survey betrayed the story tellers of the great open spaces? It is making prevaricators of those Western travelers who for years have been telling the tenderfoot that a horsehair rope coiled about the sleeping bag or blanket at night will keep off venomous reptiles because the hairs in the rope tickle the snakes' stomachs, and snakes, as everyone knows, are excessively ticklish.

If the Survey doesn't watch out there will be a fiction bloc in congress demanding the cutting of its next appropriation, if not abolition of the bureau.

Echoes of the Past

Items of Interest as Gleaned from old files of Bucks County Newspapers

According to the files of a fifty-year-old publication of "The Intelligencer," bearing date of May 30, 1877, Bucks County could furnish snake stories with as much ease as it can today. According to reports from Upper Merion township, three large snakes, the largest of which was 11 feet, were killed near the same place. The two smaller ones measured five and six feet respectively. All of them were black snakes.

Residents of the county were instructed to be on their guard against counterfeit money. The latest counterfeit on silver halves and quarters was an article of glass. A resident of Newtown found one in his possession. In testing its qualities, he broke the counterfeit coin in half.

Mrs. Emily P. Shoemaker, widow of John L. Shoemaker, Philadelphia, sold her beautiful house at Tullytown for $15,000. Mrs. Shoemaker intended making her home in Bristol.

Bearing date of Wednesday, May 16, 1877, a fifty-year-old publication of "The Intelligencer" described a wreck on the North Penna. Railroad between Sellersville and Quakertown, when eight freight cars were thrown to the side of the track as the result of the locomotive having struck a cow. The freight cars contained cows and about 30 of them were killed and 30 others so badly injured that they had to be killed. A dispatch was sent to Philadelphia asking for several butchers. Upon their arrival at the scene of the accident, the cows which were badly injured were killed and the meat was dressed for market. None of the crew were injured with the exception of Oliver Shellenberger, who had his hand and face somewhat bruised.

The usual quiet of Penn's Park was broken one evening by a race on the turnpike. The contestants were Edward Wilkinson, Rush Valley, who drove a horse hitched to a carriage, and Isaac Pierson, who ran in his stocking feet. Three heats were run, the first of 150 yards and the other two 75 yards. The horse was an ordinary traveler, while Pierson, who won the race, was very fleet of foot. He broke his own record in the second heat, coming in five yards ahead on the home stretch. The event drew quite a large crowd.

Specifications were prepared by the County Commissioners for the erection of three county bridges. One of these spans was to have been built in Hilltown township across Morris Run. Another was to have been erected across the Nesaminy creek at Sackett's Ford, while a third was to have been built in Nockamixon township to cross Gallows Run in the vicinity of Kintnersville. The Commissioners also received the plans presented by a number of architects for the new court house to be built in Doylestown to replace the one which was too small.

The body of a man about 55 years of age was taken from the Delaware river at Bristol. All efforts to identify him failing, his body was interred in the strangers' corner of the cemetery at Bristol. It was thought the man had committed suicide. A handkerchief was tied around his neck and attached to the handkerchief was a strap, to which it was thought the man had buckled a stone or piece of iron in order to make him sink as he entered the water.

Matinee Ladies

BY William B. Courtney

"MATINEE LADIES," with May McAvoy, is a Warner Bros. pictureization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Bob Ward, college student, gets work as a dancing partner for rich women in a New Jersey roadhouse. There he meets the prettiest, sweetest girl he has ever laid eyes on—Sally Smith, the cigarette girl. Reciprocating his interest, she warns him against the mysterious and beautiful Mrs. Hammond, habitué of the Inn, who finds her "thrill" in "hunting" Bob for her loved one's apartment. Mrs. Smith, meeting Bob, is hostile; favoring Mammion, a rich suitor. Mrs. Hammond tells Bob she frequents the Inn only as a writer secretly in search of color.

Bob was quite overwhelmed by Mrs. Hammond's long explanation of her "playing"; and flattered, of course, at the apparent extent of her interest and trust in him.

"It's nice of you, Della, to tell me all this," he said earnestly.

"I did so because I like you; because I know your talents, your mind, are much above the ordinary," she smiled.

During all this conversation they had been alternately dancing and resting at Mrs. Hammond's table. Bob had the feeling that a great load had been lifted from his chest. That a most wonderful thing had happened to him. He believed Mrs. Hammond implicitly. There could, indeed, be small grounds to doubt the sincerity in her low-pitched voice, in her anxious manner. It surely was a grand thing for him to have found so influential a friend. It was lucky he had not credited too much the catty quips of the women about Mrs. Hammond; the wisecracks of his chums. Della Hammond was far and away too good to be spoken of in the same breath as most of the people around here.

Excepting Sally, of course. Enraptured though he was by the revelations of Mrs. Hammond, Bob had not neglected to pay constant tribute to pretty little Sally, in the way of admiring smiles, caressing smiles, all sorts of smiles, and now and again when the chance offered in passing, whispered words of endearment.

"Please be sure to explain to Bob!"

Mrs. Hammond had observed these last things with a beautifully modulated smile masking the hatred in her heart; the frustrated, longing, passion in her blood. She had even essayed a complimentary word or two about Sally. That was part of her scheme.

There was also another part of her scheme that struck from an unseen, unsuspected angle. Acting upon secret instructions from Mrs. Hammond, the all-wise Madame Leonine, about an hour before the usual closing time, called Sally to her.

"Listen, honey," she said, "Mazie Revere is throwing a party tonight, see, and I want you to go to her house for me right away with a message. That's a dear. I'll make it square with you."

"But," protested Sally, "I've a date to ride home with Bob Ward."

"Oh, Bob won't mind when he knows you're doing an errand for me. I'll see Bob after this dance is over, and explain to him. Leave Bob to me, honey. I'll set him straight. But you've got to hurry, honey; Mazie is waiting. Please, run right along."

Madame Leonine had a way with her; she little Sally Smith was quite overruled by the aggressiveness of her employer, and before she knew it was bundled off on her way to Mazie's. She tried to catch Bob's eye before she had been hustled into the dressing room, willy nilly, by the Madame; but Bob was dancing. Departing through the side door, she had not had another chance to see him.

Bob! Sally cautioned the Madame, in leaving.

"I will!" Madame Leonine promised easily.

Then Sally was gone. Bob missed her quaint figure from among the crowded tables presently, but thought nothing of it for the time being.

Another dance started.

"Bob," said Mrs. Hammond suddenly, "I've been busy thinking over ways and means to help you best, according to the sort of help I can give. I can't very well explain it to you now. You really must ride home with me tonight. I can go over it with you on the way."

"Sorry, Della, really I am, but I've a date to take Sally Smith home. You wouldn't want me to run out on that, would you?"

"I'll be disappointed if you don't place your future above such silly little things as a date with Sally Smith, Bob!" she said earnestly, and in such a reproachful way that Bob felt not a little sheepish.

"It isn't that I put the date ahead of more serious things," he tried to explain, but without even convincing himself, "but I hate to break appointments."

Mrs. Hammond said nothing to that; but just contrived to look inwardly disappointed and impatient. Bob felt very dumb and guilty.

After the dance, he excused himself to Mrs. Hammond and went in search of Sally. A brief glimpse of her dear face would reassure him in his course. Her absence had become noticeable. He looked for her unavailingly. He questioned Freddy and Archie. No; they had not seen her. He anxiously sought out Madame Leonine, who said, with her mechanical and frozen sort of smile:

"Sally? Oh, Sally left a little while ago, Bob. Said she had to get home early. Date or something."

"Did she leave any message for me?" Bob was hurt.

"No, Bob!"

Off in the grandly embowered orchestra platform, the jazzy strains of the last dance were beginning. Bob hurried to Mrs. Hammond.

"Della," he said as they danced away upon the glassy boards, "I'll ride home with you tonight, if you still want me to!"

CHAPTER XIII
They were in the cozy interior of Mrs. Hammond's imported limousine. Bob's strong, heavy young body sank luxuriously into seat pillows of a softness and beauty that had never been more than a remote fancy to him heretofore; Mrs. Hammond's aristocratic figure gracefully disposed, with crossed legs that subtly displayed an exquisite ankle and calf, and—just as subtly!—modestly covered the knee.

She rode in that gorgeous coach of wealth as one to the purple manner born, as Cleopatra of old must have sat upon her Nile barge.

Bob rode unbelievably—as one to the bus and subway born!

The chauffeur was shut off from them by a thick glass partition. This chauffeur, anyway, Bob noted, was an automaton, a Robot, and hardly a thinking or interested human being. He was a perfect chauffeur.

Now and then, when the exigencies of traffic or road conditions were too much for even the marvelous springs of this marvelous car to take up entirely, Mrs. Hammond would cleverly manage enough of a sway so that she could accidentally brush Bob's hand, or arm, or shoulder. In each of those thrilling moments, she would feel a thrill of control. It was genuinely difficult to control her impulses, her fever, now that she was so intimately situated with her big boy prey. He was her Adonis, and she wanted to be Venus. But Venus was a crude and vulgar creature compared to Mrs. Hammond. Venus had no self-control. Mrs. Hammond had magnificent self-control.

Inwardly she reveled in her thrill. Outwardly she sat serene and rather haughty.

The great car fled noiselessly, like a chariot on air, through the Palisade hinterland, and later threaded pantherlike through the jungle of Manhattan's traffic.

Sometime during the trip across the Port Lee Ferry, Mrs. Hammond had diffidently brushed the subject which Bob was dying to hear, though from sheer politeness he had foreborne to question her.

"It's awfully hard for me to talk this over with a chap like you, Bob, for several reasons. In the first place, your inexperience with life no doubt makes you suspicious of all women; and in the second place, I am sure that the people at the Palisado Inn have poisoned your mind against me—" she said softly.

"No one can poison my mind against you, Della," he interrupted with the hot loyalty of youth. "I think you're a square shooter, and that's all that counts!"

Mrs. Hammond smiled to herself to see how easily he had stepped into the trap of her pre-arranged.

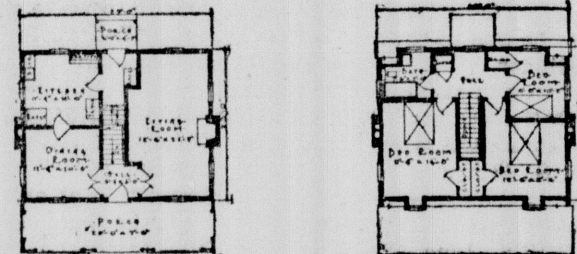

Mrs. Burge was formerly Miss Frances Lane, a member of the teaching staff of the Bristol High School.

—Miss Anna Potts, of Atlantic City, N. J., passed Thursday at the home of her mother, Mrs. Anna Potts, of Spruce street.

BUY IN BRISTOL!

A DOLLAR SPENT IN BRISTOL IS WORTH TWO SPENT ELSEWHERE BECAUSE IT IS REINVESTED BY LOCAL PEOPLE IN LOCAL ENTERPRISES AND HELPS TO PAY FOR LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS

Did you ever really give the subject of the local merchant and you any serious thought?

Perhaps you are a loyal citizen and patronize local shops and stores as a matter of loyalty, but as this is not a lecture it will do no harm to read this, anyhow.

Your local merchant is first a citizen, a resident of your community the same as you are.

He lives in your community, pays taxes along with you for the upkeep and improvement of your community; he raises his family and sends his children to school—schools which he helps, with you, to maintain.

If he is a butcher, he buys clothes and shoes for his family from a fellow-merchant. No matter what his line of business, he spends money with other business men of the community.

He banks in local banks; he takes his family of an evening to the local shows.

Summed up, the money he makes in the community is spent in it.

Were it not for your local merchant, there would be no schools, no paved streets, no public buildings, no progress nor prosperity. He is here day in and day out, rain or shine, giving his time and energy and money to whatever will benefit the district, taking part in the administrations of the community or aiding to regulate the administration for the best interests of the community by his vote.

HE IS A CITIZEN—

Is he not entitled, then, to consideration?

But there is something more than a call for your loyalty to him as citizen to citizen—neighbor to neighbor.

Living here as he does, he comes to know his customers. They are to him not "just customers," but "fellow citizens," "good neighbors." As he will be here tomorrow and the next day and next year, meeting his customers face to face, day after day, his business gets his personal attention—every transaction is a personal dealing between him and the patron.

He is your neighbor—your fellow citizen, building for tomorrow and next year, and fully cognizant that the only way to build is to sell good goods at right prices.

Your local merchant is in himself a guarantee of his goods and prices and services because he is always at the same stand meeting largely the same customers.

He cannot exist upon the patronage of transients—his livelihood comes from permanent residents; his aim is to make permanent residents regular customers. He must do this—hence his wares, his prices and his service are all and always arranged and held to this end.

You never heard your live-wire, wide-awake home merchant say, "Oh, well, one customer more or less makes no difference." Every customer, to him, is important; a new customer is eagerly sought, and a customer less—well, your local merchant will not let it happen if anything just and reasonable under the sun will prevent such a thing happening.

So not alone out of a sense of loyalty to your community, but for your own sake—for the sake of your purse and the satisfaction of being given personal attention and service—buy of our home merchants.

WELL-BALANCED MEAT-LESS MENUS

(Editor's Note: Paste this article in your cook book. It's one of the series by six famous cooks running exclusively in this paper.)

It's really a good thing to leave meat out of our diet once in a while. Cheese and eggs are very good substitutes for meats, and can be used in many enticing ways.

A very attractive menu is given today by Miss Margaret Allen Hall, nutrition specialist at the Battle Creek College of Home Economics. This entire meal can be cooked at the same time in the oven, too.

A Good Menu
Macaroni and cheese
Baked onions
Stuffed tomatoes
Strawberry shortcake
You may serve any beverage with this meal. Perhaps the family would prefer iced tea, served with slices of lemon, or lemonade.

Macaroni and Cheese
1 1/2 cups macaroni
1 1/2 cups grated cheese
1 cup buttered crumbs
4 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
1 teaspoon salt
Cook the macaroni in boiling salted water, until tender. Drain and pour over it a dash of cold water. Make a white sauce of the last four ingredients and mix with the macaroni. Stir the grated cheese into the mixture. Turn into a baking dish, cover with buttered crumbs and bake in a moderate oven until nicely browned.

Stuffed Tomatoes
Stuffed tomatoes are a real addition to almost any menu.
6 large tomatoes
2 cups stale bread crumbs
2 tablespoons butter
2 teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons finely chopped onions
Cut off the blossom end of firm, ripe tomatoes and remove the inside portion. Prepare dressing by placing the butter and onion in a saucepan and cooking until nicely browned. Add salt and bread crumbs, molasses, slightly with juice from the inside portion of tomatoes. Fill tomato shells with the dressing. Place in a buttered pan and bake in a moderate oven about one-half hour.

Strawberry Shortcake
This favorite American dessert, strawberry shortcake, is always a treat.
2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
4 tablespoons fat
2 tablespoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup milk
Sift dry ingredients. Cut fat in with two knives, add milk slowly. Turn mixture into deep cake pan and bake in hot oven twenty-five minutes. When baked, remove from pan, split, spread with butter, and place sweetened, crushed berries between layers and on top of shortcake.

A huge super-burner which cooks as fast as gas is one of the most recent improvements found on one of the newest and most modern oil stoves.

Also Meatless
Another good meatless meal has corn omelet for its main dish. These recipes are also Miss Hall's.

Corn omelet
Spinach a la Bechamel
Baked mushrooms
Cream puffs
Eve's rag
In planning several menus you can save using your oven two days in a row if you make the cream puff shells when you cook Menu No. 1. Do not fill the puffs, however, until ready to serve them. Fill with whipped cream, slightly sweetened, or a thick custard.

Cream Puff Shells
1 cup hot water
1/2 cup butter
1 cup white flour
4 eggs
1/2 teaspoon salt
Heat the butter and water to boiling. Add the flour, mixing thoroughly, and cook for a few minutes, stirring constantly. Set aside to cool. When cool, add the beaten eggs, one at a time, and mix thoroughly before another is added. Drop from a tablespoon upon a buttered baking sheet and bake in a moderate oven twenty-five minutes, or until light when lifted from the pan.

Corn Omelet
4 eggs
1/2 cup drained stewed corn
4 tablespoons bread crumbs
4 tablespoons milk
1 teaspoon salt
Separate eggs, beat the yolks until thick. Add milk, drained corn, one-half of salt, bread crumbs, and remainder of salt to whites of eggs and beat until stiff. Fold stiffly beaten egg whites into first mixture. Heat frying pan, grease well, pour mixture into pan and cook slowly over low flame until set.
Insert spatula or knife around edges of omelet to determine when mixture is sufficiently set. Place omelet in oven for a few minutes to brown on top.

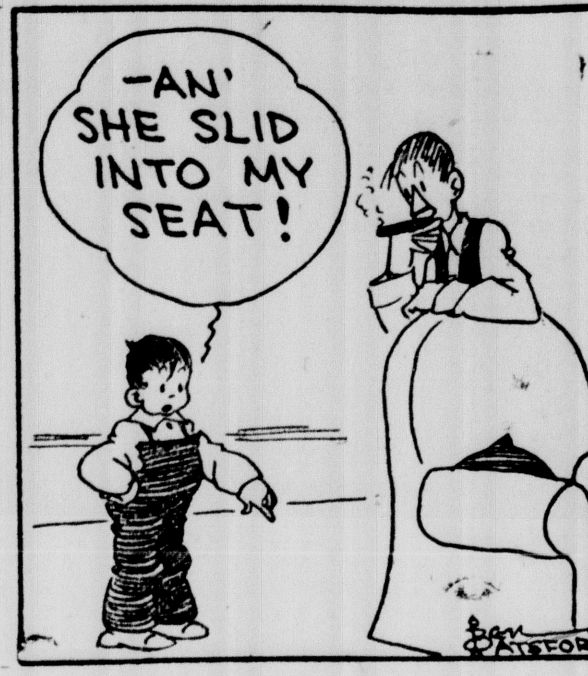

A Spinach Change
After you have cooked spinach as usual, boiled for 25 minutes in the least possible water, serve it with Bechamel sauce. Put three tablespoons butter in hot omelet pan; when melted add chopped spinach. Cook three minutes. Sprinkle with 2 tablespoons flour, stir thoroughly and add 1/2 cup milk. Cook five minutes.

A broiler which is very satisfactory on oil, gas, wood, or electric stoves is being marketed now. It is so constructed that the food cooks on both sides at the same time, with no need of turning. A drip pan collects the juices, so that delicious gravies can be made.

An easy triumph of wifhood

YOU are a wife. You must be a nurse, a home decorator, a domestic scientist, a seamstress, a laundress, a beauty specialist, a bureau of information, a buyer, a banker, a hostess. You must be all these professionals almost every day, yet you must not be tired at dinner. It must be a good dinner. You must have good news. And you must not only keep up your professions, but grow wiser in them each day.

Sounds hard, but is it? Not if you use your daily university—the advertisements. For here are the best safety-firsts; the most beautiful, most lasting draperies and home furnishings, and how to arrange them best; new food or new delicious ways of preparing and serving known foods; the finest in dress, in cold creams, hair washes, manicure methods; news of insurance; thrifty buying; happier ways to entertain; something of business, literature, art, music—of almost every science known.

The information in advertisements is latest and correct. Yet a brief glance is sufficient to give you their news. Just a daily reading of the advertisements—and there's an easy triumph of wifhood! In selecting, buying, arranging, using. In keeping fresh for dinner. Saving work, saving time, saving money—being wise!

Reading advertisements regularly means keeping to the fore.
